What We're Loving in Sarasota This Month

Despite the Covid-19 pandemic, there's much joy to be found.

Since 2004, the Embracing Our Differences outdoor exhibit has decorated Sarasota's Bayfront Park with 50 billboard-sized works of art from local and international students of all ages. The exhibit is free and open to the public from January to April and remains an activity we can still enjoy during the pandemic, with plenty of space for social distancing while strolling through the park. Themes of diversity, tolerance and love are shared with onlookers, and art displayed has been chosen from thousands of submissions to the Embracing Our Differences organization.
